

Claiming the Hunter (A Paranormals Love Book 15)

Jeremiah Tully lost his sister when a shifter attacked them while camping with friends. He blames himself and rogues, believing they are a danger to society. When he finds a group of like-minded people who call themselves hunters, he joins up and spends three years helping them hunt, capture, and sometimes even kill shifters and vampires. Then a few new guys show up, telling tales of demons, and how they want help capturing some. Jeremiah doesn't believe their tales, but when the demons attack, Jeremiah quickly turns into a believer. He flees the building, but then is chased down by one of the monsters when he crashes his dirt bike. When he wakes in some kind of clinic run by gargoyles, he thinks he's a dead man. Instead, he learns that some humans live side by side with the gargoyles as mates, and one of the gargoyles, Gratemán, is claiming him. While Jeremiah realizes he does have an odd attraction to Gratemán, can a mating between a gargoyle and a hunter really work?
