

Crossing Divides

Carter Hopkins is on a mission. He has already written about the conflict in Syria, but is determined to go even deeper. With his editors help, he joins a band of freedom fighters led by Jalal. But it is Jalals brother, Nemat, who draws Carters attention. Nemat has left the family olive grove to join his brother in fighting the Syrian government in Aleppo. When Carter saves his life and is declared an honorary member of the family, Nemat couldnt be happier, even though he knows his family will never understand his true interest in Carter. Carter and Nemat say their goodbyes after the end of the assignment. Carters stories garner a lot of attention, but he cant stop thinking of the man he left behind. Then rumors of the use of chemical weapons give Carter another chance at a story, and he jumps at it. But much has changed in Syria, and any chance of getting Nemat out of harms way seems more impossible than ever.
