

Growing Up Conservadox at JTS: A Personal Remembrance

This unusual and engaging memoir describes the authors experiences while growing up Conservadox, a never-never land supposedly to the left of Modern Orthodox Judaism and to the right of Conservative Judaism, as a scholars son at the Jewish Theological Seminary during its heyday, in the late 1950s and early 1960s. He recounts studying one-on-one with the great Saul Lieberman, Susannah Heschels quest to have a Bat Mitzvah at the Seminary, and other never-before-published stories about the Seminars then world-renowned faculty, and their wives. The book is illustrated, replete with hyperlinks to hard-to-find sources, indexed, and offers suggestions for further reading. Table of Contents: Foreword My Father, Nahum M.
