He went out at ten o'clock and found others standing in the marketplace. He said to them, 'Come, I will hire you also, and I will give you what I am able.' They went. He went out again at noon and at three o'clock, and did the same thing. At five o'clock he said to the laborers, 'Come, I will give you what I am able.' They went. When the day was over, the landowner said to his manager, 'Call the laborers, and I will give them their wages, starting with the last ones hired.' The first ones came and received their wages. The last ones came and said to the manager, 'Sir, we have worked all day long under your direction, and we have never received anything. Give us what we are due.' He replied to them, 'Friend, I am not unfair to you. Didn't I agree with you for a denarius? Come, and I will give you what I am able. The last ones were hired first, and I will give them what is right. You must be content with what you have.' So the last ones went away grumbling against the landowner. But the landowner is just. He does what he wants. So the kingdom of God is like this: The first to be called will be the last, and the last will be the first. Many are called, but few are chosen. May 1, 2004 He wrote in The Preaching of Jesus about the Kingdom of God that Jesus ..
