

Mid-Term Report

A candid, insightful, and humorous memoir from the creator of Grange Hill, Brookside, and Hollyoaks Lancashire, just outside Liverpool. Camera high to show the swirling streets of a post-war council estate. It swoops lower across the neat privet hedges and gardens, front and back. Past the grandfatherly figure pushing a mechanical lawn mower. Through the open door of the scullery with bathroom attached. Through the living room past the assembled aunts and cousins. No men in sight. Up two flights of stairs to an attic room. The midwife turns. The baby cries. Its a boy... . And so began my life. It was a normal beginning, typical of its time. But the lessons Phil Redmond learned during his modest upbringing in Huyton, Merseyside and at his comprehensive school a bus ride away would lead him to create three of Britain's longest-running and most popular television dramas: Grange Hill, Brookside, and Hollyoaks. Over the past 35 years, Phil's groundbreaking programs have gripped and entertained audiences of millions, and made household names of countless characters, from Tucker Jenkins and Gripper Stebson to Tony Hutchinson and Ruth Osborne, beside Barry Grant and Jimmy Corkhill, not to mention casting a certain Royle couple more than 15 years before the BBC caught up. Known at various times as a TV Genius, the UK's only hyphenate, and a long-haired git from Liverpool, Phil is one of Britain's most influential media personalities, whose work is an inspiration to viewers, media students, and entrepreneurs alike. His innovative, pioneering approach has brought him numerous fans and accolades along with almost as many complaints from the television regulators. In Mid-Term Report, Phil retraces the roller coaster journey which took him from growing up on a housing estate to buying one, from comprehensive school dinners to a CBE and lunch with the Queen, describing with candor, insight and humour the unforgettable lessons that he's learned and taught, along the way.
