

Just Another Baby Boomer; re-visited

This is my life. (Well, most of it) Lived as best I could. (For the most part) A Baby boomer hits back. We aren't to blame for everything that's wrong in the world today. We grew up with rationing, without computers, Facebook or Twitter, with the ever-present fear of nuclear Armageddon, without political correctness and human rights. We watched as the greatest Empire the world has ever known was dismantled. We didn't live on benefits and handouts. There was no such thing as a minimum wage. There was such a thing as very low wages. The NHS was actually run for the benefit of the patients, not the bureaucracy running it. Most of us didn't take part in the flowers in their hair thing. The vast majority of us didn't go to Woodstock, or even want to.
