

Songs from a Yahí Bow: A Series of Poems on Ishi

In 1911, Ishi emerged from an isolated hunting and gathering lifestyle in the foothills of northern California. Called the last wild American Indian, he was taken to San Francisco, where he lived until his death in 1916. Songs from a Yahí Bow, the first published book of poems on Ishi, consists of work by three poets, written across four decades, and coincides with the 100th anniversary of Ishi's emergence from the wilderness. This collection includes an introduction to recent discoveries about Ishi, as well as Thomas Merton's 1968 essay, Ishi: A Meditation.
