

The Time Teachers

Following a long series of successful experiments in 1933, aimed at predicting the results of a simple coin toss, A. L. Kitselman realized that human consciousness must be able to operate outside of the constraints of time and space. Concurrent with these experiments and in the years that followed his study of the ancient teachers of philosophy and religion, such as Kakusandha, Krishna, Buddha, Lao Tzu and Jesus, convinced him that all these teachers had a deep appreciation of the capacity of human consciousness to operate outside of time and space. In this book Kitselman outlines a unique approach to training the human mind to enhance internal integration and achieve self mastery. He draws strongly on the Theravada Buddhist tradition as outlined in the Patisambhidamagga or Path of Discernment.
