

That Uneathly Valley: A Donegal Childhood

A canny, loving portrait of a 1940s/1950s rural Irish upbringing. McGinley tells of growing up in the back of beyond, an isolated, seaside village marked by a generosity of spirit and true sense of community, wherein he first encountered such mysteries as crab toes, family, sex, death, and school, along with a larger-than-life local curate, Fr James McDyer, a radical socialist in a Roman collar. McGinley also deftly describes a number of other illustrious blow-ins to the Glen, from the renowned American painter Rockwell Kent, to Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, and British composer Sir Arnold Bax.
