

Thoughts on Religion and Other Subjects (Classic Reprint)

Monsieur Pascal in his most excellent discourse of the Trisny of Man, tells us that all our endeavours after greatness proceed from nothing but a desire of being surrounded by a multitude of persons and affairs that may hinder us from looking into ourselves, which is a view we cannot bear. Had that incomparable person Monsieur Pascal been a little more indulgent to himself, the world might probably have enjoyed him much longer; whereas, through too great an application to his studies in his youth, he contracted that ill habit of body, which, altho' a tedious sickness, carried him off in the fortieth year of his age; and the whole history we have of his life till that time is but one continued account of the behaviour of a noble soul struggling under innumerable pains and distempers.
