

Gone

How far would you go to find a child that never existed? Elizabeth Walker awakens in a mental institution, the aftermath of a nightmare in her veins. All she can think of is saving a little boy her son. But the orderlies who rush in and jab her with needles assure her she has no son. So does her mother, who demands her doctors keep her calm and prevent her from these troubling delusions. But Elizabeth's nightmares are so real, and her arms still feel the memory of holding her son. And her instincts tell her to trust no one. Her child is gone. Her memories are gone. Everything is just gone. Ex-military medic David Kerrigan will never stop blaming himself for the childhood tragedy that took his younger sister's life. Working on assignment at the facility, he's drawn to Elizabeth, and he's not sure that everything about her case is on the up and up. David knows full well he can't change the past, but what if he can save this one person? And maybe helping Elizabeth might just save them both.
